Act of Remembrance

They shall grow not old as we that are left grow old;
Age shall not weary them nor the years condemn
At the going down of the sun and in the morning
We will remember them.

Response "We will remember them".

Commitment to Remember

They were young, as we are young,
They served, giving freely of themselves.
To them, we pledge, amid the winds of time,
To carry their torch and never forget.
We will remember them.

Benediction

Their Freedom For Ours

Have you ever wondered what it would be like to experience a war? Bloodshed, death, uncertainty, and absolute terror only briefly touch on the tragedy of war to soldiers and their families. Soldiers that fought for Canada's freedom did not serve for their own benefit, but sacrificed their lives for the freedom of their country. They were motivated by the goal of someday experiencing a country liberated from the terror of war. Unfortunately, many of these courageous men and women did not survive the war to see their dream become a reality. We are given the privilege of experiencing a liberated country as a result of their heroic sacrifices.

Our freedom came at a price. Thousands of soldiers sacrificed their lives and freedom so that we could enjoy a liberated country. They did not fight for themselves, they fought for us. They endured horrific circumstances so that future generations would not be forced to experience the terror and uncertainty that they did.

Every year, on November 11, we dedicate our hearts and minds to the soldiers of the past, as well as the soldiers who stand on guard for the freedom and safety of our country today. Just as we make a personal commitment to remembering soldiers on Remembrance Day, it is also important to remember and honour them every other day of the year. Freedom is so much more than one day of remembrance, with a symbolizing poppy pinned onto our vests. Freedom is the everyday privilege we have of acting and speaking without hindrance or restraint.

Our lives should reflect undying gratitude towards soldiers for giving to use the irreplaceable gift of freedom. Every moment of every day should be lived to its fullest, as a way of honouring the soldiers of the past, present-day soldiers, and today's veterans that suffer both physical and internal scars. They die so that we can live, and suffer for our personal gain. They serve so that we may experience everyday freedom.

God Save The Queen

The Royal Anthem

God save our gracious Queen
Long live our noble Queen,
God save The Queen
Send her victorious,
Happy and glorious,
Long to reign over us:
God save The Queen.

Today we reflect on the sacrifices made by generations of the Canadian military for the protection of our fundamental values.

We are indebted to the men and women who served and continue to serve our country and we pause to remember those who made the ultimate sacrifice for our country.
